There was not a sign of a leak in any of the doors, despite the fact that they ran from 4 in-t0 1 in. pressure on the chambers. The coke was started by means of a small pusher operated by hand. After starting it slides in one mass to a pit in front of the lower door. Two men on the charging end and one on the discharging end do the work, and labor should be very low, as they only charge every 24 hours. The ovens had been working for two years with only slight repairs, and seemed to be in good shape. There is one producer for each bench, and this is outside. One feature of these chambers is that although carbon forms on the sides in about the same time as in verticals, it can...
