CONCLUSION The word of the Lord is tried, says the Psalmist; through the centuries it has been tested, so that it comes into our hands with an authentication which it did not bring to the generations before us. There are four great and rigorous tests to which it has been subjected, out of which it has come with a vast increase of authority. The first test which the Bible has successfully passed is--time. Nothing but truth lasts; everything material is perishable. The everlasting mountains is only a figure of speech, for geology shows that the mountains change and pass away. But of all things, the most perishable are the creation of men; literature is ephemeral and lasts but for a day. Of the three millions of volumes in the library of Paris, only a few thousand are what may be said to be...
